With active shooter events occurring with alarming frequency in workplaces across the nation, no longer can people cling to the mentality of "this will never happen here." In this important webinar, Mr. Mitchell will share expert insights and the lessons that can be learned from past events, as well as active shooter best practices and potential bad practices that should be avoided in the workplace.

Additional highlights from the webinar will include:

- 1) An introduction to active shooters, ugly truths behind the killers
- 2) A discussion on the three pillars of emergency response: Command, Control & Communications
- 3) The necessity for coordinated planning and communications with emergency services in advance.

4) The importance of training and exercises for employees.

5) A Q & A Session where attendees will be able to ask Mr. Mitchell pressing questions surrounding active shooter preparation and response

6) A brief introduction on how an Emergency Notification System can be utilized to communicate throughout an Active Shooter event

Those interested in learning how to prepare for and respond to active shooter events are advised to sign up today as space is limited for this exclusive webinar.
