Description

Industrial robots are likely to play an integral role across end-user industries (automotive, electronics and electrical and food and beverages) worldwide that are opting for automation of their critical applications to ensure operational efficiency and superior quality products. Inspection robots belonging to the family of industrial robots will subsequently find a higher adoption in industries like the oil and gas, petrochemical, and food and beverage industries. Initially, these industries carried out manual inspections, which fail to detect and scrutinize deviations or anomalies in the existing processes. To eliminate such instances, inspection robots are being deployed to ensure that processes are smooth and streamlined, and products match up to the quality standards.
