This report covers market characteristics, size and growth, segmentation, regional breakdowns, competitive landscape, market shares, trends and strategies

PUNE, INDIA, August 4, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Dry Bulk Shipping Market is estimated to grow moderately over the forecast period. Factors such as high economic growth, rising population and rapid urbanization, and growing steel production are boosting the need for shipping various materials used across different industries. APAC region will witness the fastest growth due to growing residential housing market and increasing investment in infrastructure, for which dry bulk materials such as steel, iron ore, and bauxite and phosphate are needed. However, slow economic growth of China will be the major restraint to the growth of dry bulk shipping market. Being one of the major world economy constituting largest market share of world's manufacturing and construction sector, has shifted from production-led to consumption-led economy, resulting in declining demand for dry bulk shipping globally.
