/EINPresswire.com/ --

The analysts forecast the global green cement market to grow at a CAGR of 14.95% during the period 2016-2020.

Cement is an essential material in any construction. It is used as a part of the blend with different materials such as bricks, stones, and sand. Cement is a gray-colored inorganic substance with extreme pressure driven binding properties. It is a finely ground blend of minerals that turns into a stone-like material when mixed with water, sand, and gravel. It is used as a part of the production of concrete, which is an essential building material for mass construction. Cement and mortar are the two fundamental mixtures used in construction. Cement, for the most part, is used as a construction material as a part of residential, non-residential, and infrastructure segments. It is also used for building beautifying applications, for example, expanding the visual offer of construction.
