

Patients At Pate Rehabilitation Distribute Donations To Area Homeless

/EINPresswire.com/ Initiative combines brain injury therapy with holiday camaraderie.

Pate Rehabilitation, delivering evidence-based treatment and support programs for individuals recovering from acquired brain injuries (ABIs), today announced that patients collected and distributed donations for The Stewpot's "Holiday Boxes for the Homeless." The Stewpot is an organization that offers a safe haven for homeless and at-risk individuals by providing resources for basic survival needs, as well as opportunities to start a new life.

Each year, patients in Pate's Independent Living Skills program choose one local charity to which they donate during the holiday season. While the process is patient-led, therapists and care providers carefully match each patient with a task that relates to his or her treatment needs—wrapping presents to improve fine motor skills or checking off donation box contents to stimulate memory processes.

"It's very inspiring to have a group of individuals so passionate about giving back to the community, especially knowing that they have gone through traumatic experiences themselves," says Dana Sims, MS, CRC, with Pate Rehabilitation.

Patients collected dental care necessities, flashlights, winter clothing and grooming products for each donation box. In addition, patients included a blank Christmas card and pen so recipients could reach out and reconnect with loved ones.

According to the Metro Dallas Homeless Alliance, 3,447 homeless people currently reside on the streets. Nationwide research suggests that up to 50 percent of these individuals have an undiagnosed brain injury that will likely go untreated.
