The global Cybersecurity market is projected to reach at an estimated CAGR of 12.6% during the forecast period 2018-2022

Cyber security primarily focuses on protecting computer, network and data from unauthorized access.

HYDERABAD, TELANGANA, INDIA, September 4, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Cyber security primarily focuses on protecting computer, network and data from unauthorized access. The rise in the number of data breach and the continuous threat posed by companies are the key growth drivers of cyber security market. Cyber attackers are now targeting the sensitive data of enterprises, as a result cyber security is becoming an integral part of their organizational activities.

Today, there is a shortage of cyber security skills in the workplace environment which makes organizations incapable of handling cyber-attacks. As hackers have changed the mode of operation by gaining access into business data center using a botnet or a malicious code. In order to handle such queries there is an increasing demand for skilled professionals. The cyber security attack such as ransom ware is expected to increase in the coming years and most of the organizations still do not have a disaster recovery solution. The data cannot be retrieved unless the organization pays the cybercriminal.

The growth of the cyber security market is driven by the necessary measures opted to counteract the increase of cybercrime, and also due to the vulnerability seen in Internet of Things (IoT) and in serverless app.
The beginning of 2018 has witnessed various investments in cybersecurity market. Threatcare, a leading cybersecurity service provider has announced a $1.4 million seed funding led by Moonshots Capital in order to advance its security testing. Arctic Wolf has also invested $16 million to improve the company's Security Operations Center (SOC) – as a service effort. Cyber security market has also witnessed few acquisitions such as Digicert's has acquired Symantec's web security and PKI solutions for $950 million. Synopys has acquired Black duck for $65m and Cyberark's for $42m. Microsoft will be investing around $1 billion on cybersecurity research and development. The company also has acquired three security firms in Israel.

The future of cybersecurity mainly revolves around big data, blockchain technology and artificial intelligence. Big data will be used by security analysts to predict attacks and identify malicious attack even before they strike. The blockchain technology will help businesses to authenticate devices and users without using any password. Artificial Intelligence (AI) system will be employed to detect threats and attacks; the system will be able to remediate the solution on their own. AI can help in categorizing attacks based on their threat level.
