Skateboard wheels are the most important part to decide when it comes to choosing Skateboards. Choosing a skateboard depends on the diameter or hardness of the material. It decides how the skateboards feel or rides, how fast it can move. The wheels should not grip the ground too much, also it should be strong enough to support the weight of the skateboard and provide the right amount of balance. Considering these points, plastic or rubber materials are kept out of the production facility because plastic does not grip the ground and rubber gets ripped apart due to the friction. Polyvinyl Chloride (PVC) or Polyurethane (PU) materials are considered for the skateboard wheel material.

There are three main categories for the skateboard wheels: park or street wheels, cruiser wheels and longboard wheels. The choice of wheels depends on personal preferences and the kind of ride one wants. Some wheels are supportive of doing flips and technical tricks while others can give the cruising speed. Wheel diameter is also an important aspect to look for. Smaller wheels are lighter and good for technical skating, while larger heavier wheel rolls faster especially on rough surfaces. Wheel surface, hardness, and shape of the wheel are the other crucial aspects for skateboard wheel choosing.

Growth of the global market for the skateboard wheel is directly in sync with the popularity of the sports at all levels. Skateboard is becoming more popular as cost involvement is lesser than other outdoor sports. Providing adequate infrastructural support is essential in developing the skateboard market.
