Market segmentation

The Outlook chapter mainly includes the main dynamics of the market, which includes the drivers, limitations, opportunities, and problems facing the industry. Motives and limitations are important, while opportunities and challenges are external to the market. The transformation of consumer preferences into natural sweeteners, modern retail growth, urbanization, health problems, and the development of new products from Stevia extracts has led to a global market diversion. On the other hand, fluctuations in the price of stevia leaves and a lack of awareness of the benefits of Stevia in some regions may impede global growth worldwide.

Factors Affecting Growth Prospects

Consumers are beginning to take an interest in knowing what ingredients are in their food products, and so they order the “best for me” products. Stevia extracts were approved for use in the EU only in November 2011. Therefore, stevia consumption is still very low. The Asia-Pacific countries have the largest consumer of Stevia in the world, mainly due to rapid population growth.
