LONDON, GREATER LONDON, UK, March 25, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The global switchgears market is expected to grow at a rate of about 11.1% and reach $88.43 billion by 2023. The demand for electricity generation is projected to drive the switchgear market. However, unstable prices of raw materials are restraining the growth of the switchgear market.

The switchgear market consists of sales of switchgears and related services that are used in various applications such as in transmission and distribution utility, residential, commercial and industrial. A switchgear refers to a collection of switching devices that are used for controlling, protecting, and switching electrical circuits and equipment.
