

The Basics with Rami Malek

LEO covers all the basics with Oscar-winning actor Rami Malek, most recently co-starring as Bond villain Safin in 'No Time To Die.'

LOS ANGELES, CA, UNITED STATES, October 13, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- From the song that brings him back, to his favorite dish, dream car, go-to cocktail, film he's watched more times than he can count, and what he would go back and tell his 13-year-old self, we cover all the basics with 'No Time to Die villain' and Oscar-winning actor Rami Malek.

Rami Malek is most known for dark, dramatic characters, often with cavernously-seated disturbances. In real life, the LA-born, Egyptian actor radiates lightness of being with a warm, deeply considered but open disposition, a game-for-anything demeanor and an easy, infectious laugh. And he's just as quick to turn that humor on himself.

Excerpts from LEOedit.com's story:

LEO: Favorite restaurant anywhere?

RAMI: "Chez Jay in Santa Monica. It's the kind of place where you can throw your peanut shells right on the floor. Tim Van Patten recommended it. He's the coolest, so I pretty much just try to emulate him."

LEO: Character you dressed up as as a kid?

RAMI: I love Halloween. I've done every Tim Burton character known to man. I did a pretty good Edward Scissorhands one year. I also went as young Forrest Gump once; one of the first projects I ever did, I got to work with Tom Hanks and mustered up the balls to show him the photo, and I think he enjoyed that visual.
