Detergents & Liquid Soaps Are Set to Surpass US$ 170 Mn Mark

Detergent & liquid soaps segment has dominated the alpha olefin sulfonates market in 2018 and is set to maintain its supremacy in the market surpassing US$ 170 Mn by 2029. Being an anionic surfactant, it is able to function as detergent, wetting agent and as an emulsifier in broad range of applications.

Alpha olefin sulfonates offer other bundled benefits including high foaming profile and a quick flash foam to produce a stable lather. It also allows personal care products to be offered as preservative-free aqueous solutions, due to which detergent & liquid soaps application is set to remain key consumer of alpha olefin sulfonates in the market.

Furthermore, increasing consumption of alpha olefin sulfonates in niche applications including insulation production and crop protection are set to assist the market's growth. However, other substitutes like alpha-sulfonated methyl esters manufactured from completely bio-based sources may hinder the consumption of alpha olefin sulfonates.
