I feel like I'm listening to the Bonnie Raitt of the next generation.”

Kathy Mattea

For Taylor, her inclusion on the program is a singular honor. “I’m a huge fan so I am incredibly humbled,” she states. With a voice that can ring like a bell, grind with grit, or gently caress, Taylor’s emotive performances are quickly becoming legendary. She can rouse a crowd to its feet or hypnotize them with her songs - holding any audience in the palm of her hand with a powerful voice that is distinctly her own.

Her far-ranging style is a natural fit for Mountain Stage, which has featured artists representing almost every genre of music, including traditional Roots, Folk, Blues, and Country, to Indie Rock, Alternative, Synth Pop, World music, and beyond. Some of their most iconic guests over the years have included John Prine, Odetta, Wilco, R.E.M., Phish, Mavis Staples, Allen Toussaint, Alison Krauss, Townes Van Zandt, Patti Smith, Miriam Makeba, Dr. John, and Preservation Hall Jazz Band. The two-hour program is currently hosted by Grammy Award winner and West Virginia native, Kathy Mattea.

Taylor continues to tour in support of MAD TWENTIES, and she joins Pokey LaFarge for three shows: tonight at the City Winery Nashville, Saturday, May 14 at the City Winery in Atlanta and Sunday, May 15 at The Burl in Lexington, KY. On Sunday, May 22, she will be in New Braunfels, TX at the Americana Music Jam with Radney Foster and Ray Wylie Hubbard. For those unable to catch a live show, her latest music video, "Window," is available now on YouTube. The "trippy" clip, her fourth music video, dropped on Bicycle Day in commemoration of Albert Hofmann's discovery of lysergic acid diethylamide 71 years ago on April 19.
