Raicilla is a Mexican alcoholic beverage that is produced in Jalisco and two varieties are used for its preparation: the lechuguilla agave and the raicilla agave of the inaequidens and maximiliana species which are endemic to the state. Currently, raicilla is produced in 32 municipalities of the Jalisco state, but the ones produced in San Sebastian del Oeste and Cabo Corrientes – El Tuito - are the most prominent. This distillate was added as Denomination of Origin to Mexico's list, besides tequila, this is the second liquor made in the state of Jalisco.
