Soul, R&B, and Funk converge as Atlanta vocalist and composer Travis Hall debuts his 16-piece live show at Center Stage on October 22.

ATLANTA, GA, UNITED STATES, October 17, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Travis Hall Brings Soul, R&B, and Funk to Center Stage Atlanta with Debut Album HeART Museum

A new voice is emerging from Atlanta's rich musical landscape. On Wednesday, October 22, 2025, singer, songwriter, composer, and arranger Travis Hall will take the stage at Center Stage Atlanta for the official release concert of his debut album, HeART Museum.

The performance will unite a 16-piece band featuring some of Atlanta's most accomplished musicians, delivering a live experience that blends the warmth of 1960s and 1970s soul with the polish and pulse of 21st-century R&B.

Hall's debut project honors the legacy of Black American music while introducing his own vision for its future. The album moves fluidly between funk, soul, and contemporary R&B, marked by lush arrangements, live instrumentation, and intimate storytelling—a reflection of Hall's background as both a modern soul artist and a classically trained opera singer.

Having toured more than 200 times with The Atlanta Opera, Hall brings a rare combination of technical mastery and emotional depth to the R&B stage. His performances recall the richness of Earth, Wind & Fire, Luther Vandross, and Stevie Wonder, while his songwriting echoes the craftsmanship of Ashford & Simpson and Brenda Russell.

The HeART Museum concert will feature Hall's acclaimed debut singles "A Day" and "Fireflies", along with selections from the forthcoming full-length album. The music explores themes of love, legacy, and the Black musical tradition, connecting past and present in a single narrative of sound and soul.

"This project is about remembering where our sound comes from and reminding the next generation that soul music is living, breathing, and evolving," says Hall. "HeART Museum is a place where every song represents a piece of our shared story."
