

Premier Auto Protect Reports Extended Car Warranty Demand Surges as Repair Costs Climb

Premier Auto Protect notes rising interest in extended car warranties as drivers adjust to higher repair costs and longer vehicle ownership cycles.

We're hearing from drivers who want steadier repair planning, and our focus is on giving them precise coverage details and support they can rely on as vehicles become more complex.”

Owner

of extended vehicle service plans, today commented on the sustained rise in demand for extended car warranties as vehicle repair costs continue to climb across the United States. Industry indicators show multi-year increases in out-of-pocket repair expenses, influenced by parts complexity, electronics integration, and labor constraints. Independent benchmarks, including the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics' Consumer Price Index category for motor vehicle maintenance and repair, have reflected notable price pressures over the past several years. As households plan for longer ownership cycles and higher average vehicle age, more drivers are evaluating protection options beyond factory warranties.

Rising repair costs shape consumer behavior

Several dynamics are contributing to the shift. Modern vehicles incorporate advanced sensors, modules, and software-driven systems that can increase diagnostic time and parts costs. Simultaneously, the average age of vehicles in operation has trended upward, increasing the likelihood of component failures outside the original coverage windows. Taken together, these factors have encouraged consumers, dealers, and lenders to view extended coverage as a budgeting tool to help stabilize exposure to unexpected repairs.

Recent public data sets and industry reports have chronicled this pattern. For example, the BLS CPI series for motor vehicle maintenance and repair has registered higher costs in recent years. At the same time, cost-of-ownership studies have highlighted the budget impact of unplanned maintenance for both newer, technology-heavy models and older, high-mileage vehicles. These macro trends are consistent with what the company is hearing from customers and partners in the field.
