Kathryn A. Gilbert, Bergen County, N.J. divorce attorney, announced today that her firm will now offer free consultation services to clients seeking a collaborative divorce.

She understands better than most attorneys in the industry that collaborative settlements between couples can mean less stress, less expense and often, happier children during these trying proceedings. "Our objective is to assist our clients achieve their long term goals in a cost effective manner without compromising their integrity or the happiness of their family members," said Kathy Gilbert, owner of KA Gilbert Law. "The Collaborative process is an especially good resolution process for parents concerned about the well-being of their children. It focuses on maintaining a family even though Mom and Dad will be residing in separate households."

Ms. Gilbert added that other benefits of collaborative divorce are that both parties come to a mutually agreeable resolution that is a product of their own decisions and that all meetings between the couple and their attorneys are private and confidential. This is quite different than traditional divorce proceedings where all documents become public records and are available to children, neighbors or employers.

"There are challenges to collaborative divorce too so it is vitally important that people find out right away if this is or is not the best course of action for them," said Gilbert. During a consultation with Ms. Gilbert, clients can explore whether they are good candidates for this process or they may realize that they are better off pursuing traditional divorce litigation to settle their matrimonial issues.
