

Italian Prodigy Jewelry Brand CITIMI Adds Florence, Milan and Monte Carlo to Its Unique Range of Cityscape Jewelry

Spectacular landmarks of 4 new cities were turned into 3D cityscape rings, skyline bracelets and necklaces with truly unusual level of detalization and passion.

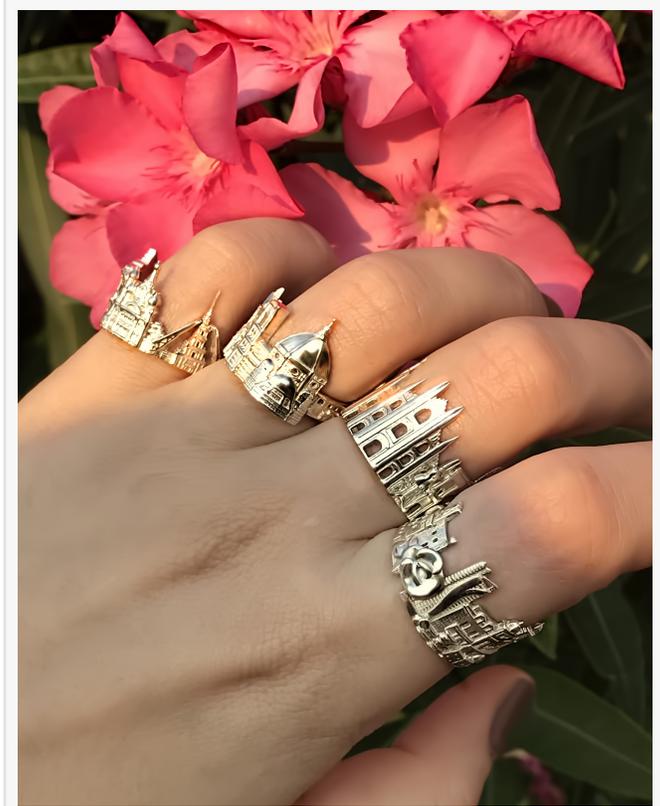

MILAN, ITALY, July 10, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The bold lines and intricate nature of a city landscape holds a certain beauty, one that provides unlimited inspiration for inquisitive, wanderlust thinkers. CITIMI is the brainchild of new, undergrad fashion talent with a similar mind, offering an original jewelry range of rings and necklaces that capture the wonder of 26 urban cities in unique, powerful but delicately detailed architectural designs. CITIMI is on the route to become the new fashion darling, with features in latest Vogue, GQ, Conde Nast Traveller and Glamour, eager to jump on the rising trend of cityscape rings.

While architectural jewelry conjures up a specific image in the mind of seasoned fashionistas, the new CITIMI range, designed by Natalia Gagulina, redefines this aesthetic. Taking the term literally, the fantastic forms of landmarks across the globe such as the London eye, La Sagrada Familia and the Sydney Opera House are cast alongside their city's skyline neighbours, offering a new, beautiful take on structural jewelry.

Natalia Gagulina, CEO and designer at CITIMI revealed, "I am lucky to have lived in a wide range of wonderful places ranging from snowy Moscow, where I was born, and all the way through to Milan, where I studied. Each of these places has touched my soul, and the aim of my range was to connect with this, while also making these experiences available for more people to enjoy. Each new destination I travel to spawns a new collection, and so it continues to grow alongside my personal journey!"

Although the diverse CITIMI range comprises of 26 vibrant cities that cover all corners of the globe, the Moscow ring and necklace were the first ever pieces created by Natalia, paying homage to her Russian origins.

Fashion fans in search of contemporary, customised style can choose from the remaining city forms to also adorn themselves with a similar sense of personalisation. With 'must-visit' destinations such
