

ATLAS Workbase Adds 6,000 Square Feet to its Flagship Lower Queen Anne Location

33% pre-lease commitment, project slated for completion end of Q1 2018; adds street-level entrance at 5th and Roy, secure elevator access to parking garage

SEATTLE, WA, UNITED STATES, October 12, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- ATLAS Workbase, the coworking company aimed at executive class/business users who seek a more professional shared workspace, today announced it has completed demolition to add 6,000 square feet of floor space to its existing 20,000 square foot flagship Seattle facility at 500 Mercer Street in Lower Queen Anne/South Lake Union. The project, slated for completion by end of Q1 2018, has a 33% pre-lease commitment. Upon completion, ATLAS Workbase will occupy most of the C2 floor plate, above the QFC supermarket operated by The Kroger Company.

As part of the expansion, ATLAS Workbase will gain a private, secure 24/7 entrance at 5th and Roy, along with a third direct and secure elevator to the building's underground parking. Providing 24/7 access meets critical demand from professionals and worldwide business users traveling to Seattle who require on-demand business services and spaces at any time; as well as other groups that seek meeting spaces for local community building and other non-work-related events.

In addition to the physical expansion of its space, the look and feel inside ATLAS will be infused with full building transparency from Mercer Street through to Roy Street.

"We are ecstatic about the success of our first facility, and eager to further accommodate existing and future members with a bigger and even more open space, and greater availability of our state-of-the-art meeting options," said ATLAS Workbase CEO Bill Sechter.

ATLAS Workbase delivers a high-end work environment married with a "Third Place" experience that is unmatched in the coworking industry. This is in sharp contrast to established coworking spaces that generally cater to tech companies and whose focus is on creating a fun and highly social experience.

The company expects to announce several more facilities in Seattle, and throughout the Pacific Northwest as it begins its national roll-out.
