BROOKLYN, NY, UNITED STATES, November 21, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The battle between Uber and traditional taxi services are just heating up in NYC and while the results may seemingly be in doubt for now, the truth is that both types of services offer advantages that complement the other.

Advantages of Uber

There are numerous advantages that Uber currently offers, not only to those who use the service, but to those who drive for Uber. The Uber driver works on his or her timeframe and can earn as much money driving as they want. However, these are not the only advantages that Uber has to offer.

Lower Fees: Because there is less regulation and overhead, the fees that Uber drivers charge is usually significantly lower compared to taxi services. This is arguably the main reason why Uber has managed to carve a significant market from traditional taxi companies as the lower fees make it competitive.

Uber drivers are not working for a taxi service, but instead for themselves which means that they are more inclined to improve their services.

Pay Uber, Not the Driver: For passengers, they do not have to carry cash on them to use Uber services. They pay Uber online and in turn Uber pays the driver. This simple system makes Uber more friendly and easier to use, especially when short of cash.

Uber was designed to take advantage of the areas in which traditional taxi services were falling short. By providing a new service that uses regular people with qualifying driving records, vehicles that they own or lease, and offering lower fees for their services, Uber has become a big threat to the way taxi services have done their business over the years, especially given the monopoly they have enjoyed
