The DME industry is witnessing high growth on an account of increasing applications, technological advancements, and growing demand in the energy deficit countries. Countries in Asia-Pacific region, except Japan, are majorly focused on using DME for blending with LPG. DME is largely used for blending with LPG, as an aerosol propellant, and as a diesel substitute. Coal is the major feedstock employed for manufacturing DME worldwide. The countries, which are rich in natural gas, prefer to invest in the infrastructure so they can develop natural gas as an alternate to other fuels.
