

Trusted Vacation Rental Company announces The Best Caribbean Islands to visit in the offseason

This Autumn is a great time to visit the Caribbean.

NEW YORK, UNITED STATES, August 16, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- It's not always possible to choose the perfect time to go on vacation, and if you need to recharge between the months of August and October, the Caribbean is often forgotten. But several of the Caribbean islands are almost completely unaffected by hurricanes and have near perfect weather year-round. For people who like to have the pick of the best restaurants, the best spots on the beach, enjoy not being surrounded by crowds, like interacting with the locals and also love a bargain, then the off-season can be the perfect time to go.

Exceptional villas are the experts on everything to do with the Caribbean and have confirmed that the best three islands to go in the offseason are Barbados, Aruba and The Dominican Republic. Each of these islands has been virtually untouched by extreme weather in recent years. In addition, the NOAA – The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration are predicting that the chances of a below-normal hurricane season have increased by 60%.

The Dominican Republic is showing substantial growth in bookings this 2018 season”

If you are in need of a vacation over the next couple of months, this is all great news. The three islands of Aruba, Barbados and Dominican Republic are all well worth considering. Of course, before making a booking, the best advice is to ensure that your vacation rental provider has a solid hurricane plan in place and to always buy travel insurance.

Aruba is located south of the hurricane belt making it virtually unheard of to be hit by bad weather. Aruba offers great beaches, great weather and above all great value vacation rentals. Exceptional Villas offers an excellent selection of good value homes to rent on the island. There are direct flight services from throughout the United States with Jet Blue, Delta, American, United Airlines, and Southwest.

Barbados is another island that is largely unaffected by bad weather due to its far easterly location on the Caribbean seaboard. In addition, the east coast of Barbados is quite rocky with many reefs offering the island great protection. The west coast offers a complete contrast with perfect white sandy beaches and calm turquoise waters. The last time a hurricane made landfall on Barbados was 38 years ago. That fact alone makes Barbados the perfect island to visit in the offseason. There are also direct flight services from the United States and Great Britain. Combine that with the fact that all the restaurants, shops and bars remain open year around as well as the incredible accommodation value on offer, this makes Barbados an extremely attractive destination in the low season.

The Dominican Republic has only been affected by one hurricane in every 11 years and because it is such a huge land mass, the chances of bad weather affecting your chosen holiday spot are very slim. Alexandra Baradi, Owner and CEO of Exceptional Villas said that “The Dominican Republic is showing substantial growth in bookings this 2018 season”. It is growing in popularity due to an increased awareness of its beautiful beaches, excellent value, easy access and has an excellent selection of luxury accommodation options. The Dominican Republic is a great late summer vacation spot for families and for couples looking for affordable options.
