

Senior Military representing UK, Canada, NATO, US, AFMC, France, Greece to speak at Air Mission Planning 2019 in 3 weeks

SMi Group reports: High-ranking military speakers to discuss how to maximise air power, and air mission planning as a key decider of operation success.

LONDON, LONDON, UNITED KINGDOM, March 19, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- There's just 3 weeks until SMi's 10th Annual Air Mission Planning & Support conference takes place in London, UK on 9th - 10th April.

The two-day conference will provide delegates with the unique perspectives of international military and industry organisations on maximising air power support systems, as well as air mission planning and support.

Attendees will have the chance to hear in-depth presentations from UK host nation speakers, as well as international senior military representatives from Canada, NATO, US, AFMC, France, Greece, and many more.

Topics set to be covered include:

- How air power can be maximised
- Updates on C2 systems in mission planning
- F-35 standardisation, capabilities, and program updates
- Data management and cyber security
- Enhancing mission planning systems
- Data and software standardisation between different countries and aircrafts
- Mission planning in fixed and rotary wing
- Multi-domain operations

In the run up to this year's event, Captain Sean Foote, 52d Fighter Wing Weapons Officer, US Air Force is the latest senior expert to join this year's line-up, set to share his expertise on the following topic: "From AOD to Step Brief: The Tactical Mission Planning Process for Combat Operations".

Captain Sean Foote will be focusing on a comprehensive overview of the mission planning cycle at the tactical level, successes and failures of a mission planning cell from the aviator's
