Green Globe member Inspira Santa Marta Hotel participated in a volunteer environmental initiative on the International Day for Biological Biodiversity.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, UNITED STATES, June 13, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Green Globe certified Inspira Santa Marta Hotel actively contributes to the conservation, development and enhancement of Cultural, Natural and Historical heritage, focusing on relationships with the local community. On the 22nd of May 2019, the International Day for Biological Biodiversity, the Inspira Santa Marta Team participated in a volunteer initiative with the motto "Doing The Right Thing".

The Inspira Santa Marta Team

The Botanical Garden of Lisbon with an area of approximately 4 hectares, dates from 1878 and is one of the gardens of the University of Lisbon that belongs to the National Museum of Natural History and Science. Working in collaboration with others, Team members completed maintenance tasks including the removal of weeds and other plant debris on a specific area within the Garden. This was followed by a guided tour of the Garden where there was an opportunity to gain more specific knowledge about the biodiversity of national and international species.

The Botanical Garden, especially rich in tropical species from New Zealand, Australia, China, Japan and South America, has encapsulated the peculiarities of the many different microclimates in one location. Some trees are particularly interesting due to their monumental size such as the tallest evergreen Sequoia tree in the world.
