Mount Vernon, N.Y. (August 7, 2019) – Wartburg, a senior residential and healthcare facility in Mount Vernon, NY, welcomes Lauren Cristino, ATR-BC, LCAT, a licensed and board certified creative arts therapist, as their Creative Aging & Lifelong Learning Coordinator. Lauren brings a wealth of experience in a variety of work settings such as adult and geriatric inpatient, psychiatric hospitals, outpatient clinics, long term day centers and nursing homes.

Prior to becoming a licensed creative arts therapist, Lauren obtained her Bachelor of Arts at Iona College majoring in Speech Language Pathology and Audiology and a minor in Fine Arts. A cornerstone of Wartburg's programs is their award-winning, internationally recognized Creative Aging & Lifelong Learning program. Creative Aging provides unique creative ways of increasing a senior's quality of life. Teaching artists, theatre professors, college groups from local universities, community groups, and volunteers bring Wartburg's residents the stimulation and peer camaraderie that aligns with their mission to nurture body, mind and spirit.

"Creative Aging is a vital part of our mission to providing stimulating arts-based therapies to those entrusted to our care," said Ann Frey, Director of Volunteers. "Lauren is a wonderful addition to our dynamic team and is bringing together our cadre of artists and volunteers to increase programming and enhance the benefits to our seniors."

In addition to her responsibilities to manage Creative Aging programs for Wartburg residents and the community, Lauren is implementing a fully integrated creative arts program across all disciplines, including music and dance, within the Wartburg community. In partnership with other creative arts therapists and Wartburg's clinical staff, Lauren is initiating a new level of care providing psychotherapy, a therapeutic approach to improve an individual's emotional needs by using art as a modality for communication. Not only will Lauren be practicing in groups and one-on-one sessions throughout the campus, she will also be training interns from universities throughout New York to become creative arts therapists. The interns will train with fellow music and dance movement therapists and form a collaborative team to help increase residents' quality of life.

"I am committed to bringing high quality programs needed to ensure everyone lives their best life by listening and addressing the emotional needs of our residents and the oldest members of our community as well as creating a collaborative environment of clinical staff and creative arts therapists on campus," said Lauren Cristino.

"We are excited to welcome Lauren to our Wartburg family," said Dr. David J. Gentner, Wartburg President & CEO. "With her extensive experience, enthusiasm and wealth of ideas, I have no doubt she will bring this vital program for our seniors to a whole new level."
