The automotive industry is made up of a large number of companies and organizations that are involved in the development, design, marketing, manufacturing, and selling of motor vehicles. This industry is considered to be one of the largest economic sectors in the world, in terms of revenue. However, the automotive industry does not contain sectors that focus on maintaining automobiles after delivery to the end-user, like motor fuel filling stations and automobile repair shops.

The primary types of automobiles are light commercial vehicles, cars, heavy buses and heavy commercial vehicles. Motor vehicles are generally counted among a number of vehicle classes such as light, medium and heavy commercial vehicles, passenger cars, multi-utility vehicles such as scooters, jeeps, mopeds, motorcycles, tractors, three-wheelers, etc. Automobiles can be categorized depending on the type of fuel consumption capacity, which are diesel, gasoline, electric. It also includes alternative fuels like combined electric motor-heat engine drives, hybrids and ethanol.
