-- America's Retirement Forum (ARF), a non-profit retirement education organization, is pleased to announce free retirement education classes coming to the Columbus area.

Beginning Wednesday, March 4th, retirement educators will be teaching a two-night course in Dublin, Ohio called "The Road to a Tax-Savvy Retirement".

"It is very common for retiring Americans to feel worried about running out of money – in fact, many are unprepared for the years ahead," said Bob Gavlak at America's Retirement Forum. "Today more than ever, one of the biggest challenges facing retirees is how to deal with their growing tax burdens."

During these adult education classes, America's Retirement Forum instructors will present strategies designed to help retiring Americans make better financial and tax-related decisions – and discuss ways to help attendees potentially lower their tax bills, legally and without compromising good citizenship.

ABOUT THE RETIREMENT COURSE

Planning – and paying for – retirement is getting harder every year. Recent surveys show that a significant percentage of Americans are financially unprepared to face their older years. From the crisis of retirement savings to the sunset of pension plans, many Americans know that they need help to avoid running out of money.

"The Road to a Tax-Savvy Retirement" is a 2-night class designed to equip pre-retirees and those in retirement with the tax knowledge they need to make informed decisions.

During the two 2.5-hour educational sessions, attendees will learn:

- The history of taxes, Social Security, and Medicare in the United States
- The fiscal health of the United States today
- Strategies designed to maximize income (and minimize taxes) in retirement
- The importance of having a plan for a peaceful and prosperous retirement

Additionally, a team of financial educators will be onsite and available to answer questions about tax planning and anything else related to retirement planning.
