2018 Farm Bill, Hemp and CBD Oil

In 2014, the hemp industry enjoyed a breakthrough when President Obama authorized states to allow hemp to be grown as part of state-approved pilot programs. Under the 2018 Farm Bill, the new hemp language paves the way for hemp to be reclassified as an agricultural commodity. This major coming shift will have a positive impact on hemp-derived CBD and its accessibility to sufferers across the medical spectrum from PTSD to opioid addiction. The entire industry will benefit from this move, leading to more awareness of CBD oil and hemp across the globe.

According to Forbes; With about $867 billion in investments, the Farm Bill affects all of us we rely on our food system every day of our lives. While it might seem far removed from our dining room table as it's debated, the reality is that the current version of the Farm Bill presents both opportunities and threats, has winners and losers. Hemp and its derivatives such as CBD will be the big winners.
