unique login access support compliance tracking by merchant ID, and at the department, campus, and enterprise level. This feature provides administrators and managers the opportunity to view the full compliance picture within the sphere of their control or across the organization.

“The dashboard makes it easy to see how each merchant is progressing,” said CampusGuard Central early-adopter Dayma Blanco, PCI Compliance and Merchant Services Manager, University of Miami.

Robust reporting, a full library of templates, single sign-on, and automated Self-Assessment Questionnaire (SAQ) summarization are only some of the features which provide customers with complete control over their compliance process.

“The merchant dashboard gives a good snapshot of the SAQ and offers the option of attaching a document, such as a service provider attestation,” explained CampusGuard Central early-adopter Tracy Nelson, Financial Operations, Special Projects at Longwood University. “The customer details tab provides good summary information, including SAQ progress, submission, and expiration date.”

“Our team is extremely proud to launch CampusGuard Central. We are especially grateful to our early adopters for their willingness to participate and provide invaluable input on useful features” said Harvey Gannon, CEO of CampusGuard. “Now organizations with complex environments will be able to more actively and easily manage their compliance progress.”
