Best Places to Work in Indiana is a survey competition to determine which are the best employers and measures employees' opinions about their company's direction, execution, connection, management, work, pay and benefits, and engagement. All of the employer's full- and part-time Indiana employees are included in the survey process.

"We are honored to join all of these great companies who are recognized for this year's Best Places to Work program, and we thank our employees for taking the time to respond to the survey," said Josh Woody, BlueSky's Vice President of Human Resources. "This recognition helps us to attract and retain the right talent and we use the feedback from the survey to continue to improve our workplace. Our founders, Todd Irwin and Eric Warne, had a vision to create a culture that would be embraced by employees, and this recognition is a testament to that vision. Their vision helped lay the foundation but our employees' contributions help make it a great place to work."

The company rankings will be announced in BizVoice Magazine in May.
