Industry experts predict 1985 Michael Jordan rookie shoes will sell for over $1,000,000

"Provenance, game wear, vintage autograph, overall aesthetics, these shoes have it all," stated auction President/CEO Troy R Kinunen. "With an international race to purchase the finest sports collectables, now is the opportunity to own a world class pair of Michael Jordan shoes before pricing reaches the 8-figure mark," predicts Kinunen.

The sports memorabilia market has gained worldwide attention, with collectors, professional athletes, and institutional investment money vying to purchase world class collectables. "Top investors want the best of the best from the most iconic players," said MEARS Auctions President / CEO Troy R. Kinunen. "I have never seen anything like this. It seems like more money has entered the hobby in the past 30 days than in the past 30 years combined." To illustrate his point, Kinunen notes that in May of 2020, another pair of 1985 Michael Jordan Signed Game

Worn Rookie Shoes sold for $560,000. By comparison, the coveted 1986 Fleer Michael Jordan rookie card sold for $96,000. This created a 5.8:1 ration of shoe to card value.

Current data shows there are 315 known 1986 Fleer Jordan rookie cards, and seven pairs of 1985 Michael Jordan rookie shoes have been evaluated by MEARS and used for comparison. "The numbers don't lie. Past ratios have established Jordan rookie shoes selling at nearly a 6 times greater price than his rookie card. With such a small number of rookie shoes known compared to the 315 known rookie cards, the long-term value is certainly in the shoes." exclaimed Kinunen. The shoes were personally removed off Michael Jordan's feet after a 1985 game where "Grandma", a guest of Michael Jordan, received the autographed gift. The player specific code, "TYP5" referring to the "TY" Tommy Yang factory and "PS" Player Sample, markings only found on Michael's personal stock.

With multiple examples of the PSA 10 1986 Fleer Michael Jordan card which has a population of 315 cards selling for $600,000+, it is predicted these shoes will sell for over $1,000,000!"
