Black men are so much more than what is shown in the media. We love and nurture, despite our struggles. This film gives a different perspective of black men, contrary to how the world sees us.”

Choice Skinner

Skinner's reason for creating the film is to show Black American men through another lens. “Black men are multi-faceted and so much more than what is shown in current media. We love, mourn and nurture, despite our struggles. We are also fathers, brothers and great providers to our families. I intend on using this film to entertain but also help change the narrative and give a different perspective of black men, contrary to the current day world's view of who we are.”

The film also stars Ambyr McWilliams (Snowfall), Danny Joo

(All American), Danny Royce (Nowhere Alaska), and Kailah Ami, making her acting debut alongside NFL prospect Josh Butler.

Janessa A. Morgan and Chris Rouse will serve as co-producers alongside Skinner. Executive producers include skinner producing through his Darkan Entertainment banner, Roger Julian Cross executive producing for and Shar Ross through Ross Stephens Entertainment, Inc.
