Climate change is the key agenda of the international conference.

Now more than ever, it is difficult not to see the global climate and environmental crises we are facing. Unprecedented climate disasters, abnormal cataclysms are destroying settlements and cities, depriving people of their normal lives and livelihoods. What is the real climate situation on the planet? What can we expect tomorrow? What threats and consequences will all of humanity still face? In the current consumer format of society, with information dumping and falsification of facts, the truth is hidden behind a pretty TV picture or posts on social networks.

But in reality, it is time to tell the truth about the problems and difficulties that all humankind is experiencing today. It is time to speak openly about the climate threats we all have yet to face.

The international online conference "Global Crisis. Time for the Truth" will be held on December

4, 2021, organized by volunteers of the "Creative Society" project from 180 countries. This large-scale event will bring together scientists, researchers, experts from various fields, and public figures, who will share their views on the causes of the growing climate and ecological crises.
