Kaolin, also called china clay, is a soft white clay that is an essential ingredient in the manufacture of china and porcelain and is widely used in the making of rubber, paper, paint, and many other products. It is used in the manufacture of sanitary wares, tiles, and tableware and has been significantly utilized as a direct substitute against the traditional method of cement. Further, kaolin is widely used in beauty products such as face powders, face masks, creams and lotions for oily skin, bath powders, foundation, powdered blush, deodorants, and soaps. In addition to this, kaolin clay is also used as a functional extender in paints.

Growth in Automotive Industry to Boost the Global Kaolin Market

The rising demand for automobiles globally is favoring the growth of the kaolin market. The automotive industry is one of the major beneficiaries of kaolin products as the industry extensively uses rubber-made components and parts. Kaolin improves the chemical-physical properties and performance of rubber automotive components. Kaolin is widely used in automotive tires to provide stiffness and to reinforce the rubber, bringing tear resistance and tensile strength properties in tires. In addition to this, it also helps in improving the air permeability and gas barrier of inner tire liners, which extends the service life of tires. Furthermore, kaolin finds wide applications in car body seals due to the reduced electrical conductivity, as well as its protection against corrosion. Additionally, kaolin is also used to manufacture automotive components such as fluoroelastomer O-rings for fuel injector seals, gaskets, and hoses. Furthermore, kaolin finds application in manufacturing waterborne paints and coatings, which are extensively used in the automotive industry to paint and coat automobiles' bodies and surfaces.

Impact of COVID-19 Pandemic on Kaolin Market

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, many industries, such as chemicals and materials, faced unprecedented challenges. The disruptions in the value chains due to the sudden closure of national and international boundaries hampered the market growth. However, as the economies are planning to revive their operations, the demand for kaolin is expected to rise globally in the next couple of months.
