As the novel coronavirus (COVID-19) crisis takes over the world, we are continuously tracking the changes in the markets, as well as the purchase behaviours of the consumers globally and our estimates about the latest market trends and forecasts are being done after considering the impact of this pandemic.

Market Trends:

The global market is primarily driven by rapid urbanization. The rise in migration rate from rural to urban areas in search of better amenities has fueled the market growth. Furthermore, numerous policies and subsidies offered by the governments of numerous countries for tax credit have positively influenced market growth across the globe. Moreover, the growing population rate and the high demand for better infrastructure is favoring the market growth. Besides this, various technological advancements, such as the integration of real estate with artificial intelligence (AI) and the Internet of Things (IoT), are creating a positive outlook for the market. Additionally, the increasing trend of nuclear families and inflating disposable incomes of the masses are further anticipated to drive the market growth.
