

Satellite Writer by AI Exosphere Announces Timeline For A New Mobile Application

Satellite Writer by AI Exosphere announces timeline for a new mobile application and how beta is going so far at their weekly RISE Team Days.

ORLANDO, FLORIDA, UNITED STATES, May 27, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Satellite Writer by AI Exosphere Announces Timeline For A New Mobile Application.

With the web-based beta going well, many users find themselves generating content on the go. HailyAI voice commands have enabled greater inclusion and accessibility; however, poor mobile responsiveness has hurt the Satellite Writer Beta user experience.

At the last RISE Team Day, the founders Alex Athey and Sal Peer addressed the issue. The team vowed to release a cross-platform mobile application to ensure greater reach and usability.

"Realistically, without mobile support, it's just a matter of time before we are dead in the water," said Sal Peer, CEO of AI Exosphere.

The dynamic duo were excited to share screenshots of what the application might look like and what capabilities it will have.

“

We should have a mobile version on App Store and Playstore in the next few months.”

Said Alex Athey, CTO of AI Exosphere.

Here is what we know for sure...

1. The new application will support iOS and Android.
2. Not all web-based platform features will be available on the mobile.
3. Faster response time with a set of new HailyAI skills.
4. Continued support of Speech to Text and Text to Speech.

And much more was revealed during the meeting.

It's safe to say with average session rates currently at 7:00 minutes, the company can significantly increase user experience and session time by offering a better mobile experience.

One thing is for sure Satellite Writer is here to stay, and the feedback from the initial beta users has been extremely positive regarding the quality HailyAI is capable of delivering.

The beta users have raved about the emotional intelligence system Satellite Writer brings to the table and the overall personality of HailyAI's writing.

About AI Exosphere And Satellite Writer
