The rise in health consciousness among consumers has increased exponentially. There is an ongoing shift in the dietary habits among consumers, wherein they are increasing opting for healthier plant-based alternatives. Hence, the food industry players are responding by developing a wide range of healthy alternatives, such as seed-based and nut-based sweet spreads prepared using plant-based ingredients.

Amidst the outbreak of COVID-19 pandemic, there was an increase in the demand for sweet spread products among consumer. This is attributed to the fact that consumers have been looking forward to simplifying their routines and hence shifting to products that can provide them multidimensional support. Therefore, during the pandemic, consumers were more concerned regarding their health & immunity and were actively looking for ways to maintain wellness. Sweet spread products contain iron, magnesium and is also a source of protein, which has enabled the product to gain a major demand during the pandemic. Although the out-of-house consumption of food & beverages witnessed a standstill, the at-home consumption of food has significantly increased; thereby, observing a significant share in the global food & beverages market.

By product type, the jams, jelly & preserves sweet spread category was the dominant segment in 2020 with 47.1% share. This is attributed to the fact that has a wide product offering as compared to other sweet spreads and is hence largely consumed. In addition, with the rise in trend of snackification among millennials consumer, the demand for jams, jellies and preserves has gained higher traction. However, the others segment is anticipated to grow at a faster rate during the forecast period, owing to the rising popularity of seed-based spreads due to its high protein and good fat content. These factors essentially contribute to the growing health consciousness among consumers.

On the basis of packaging, the glass category was the dominant segment in 2020 with 64.6% of sweet spread market share. This is due to consumers perception towards glass as a premium, non-toxic and reusable material. However, the plastic segment is anticipated to grow at a faster rate during the sweet spread market forecast period. This is because plastic containers are lightweight, durable, and are more suitable for transportation than glass.

According to the sweet spread market analysis, the distribution channel segmented into supermarket & hypermarket segment accounted for the maximum share in the sweet spread market in 2020. This is attributed to the fact that supermarkets & hypermarkets provide high visibility and attractive assortment of spread products to consumers. This enables them to discover new variety and understand the labels and differentiate better among products. Furthermore, supermarket chains are one of the frequently visited stores for purchasing grocery items. Hence, this factor is expected to boost the sales of sweet spread in the market. However, the online segment is anticipated to grow at a faster rate during the sweet spread market forecast period, owing to rising convenience for consumers and wider consumer reach due to brand websites.
