The employment screening services market consists of sales of employment screening services by entities (organizations, sole traders, and partnerships) that are used by companies who are hiring to examine the prospective hires fit for the job along with safety risks. An employment screening service is a process of examining a candidate and verifying their behavior, credentials, criminal history and so on to protect a business from a fraudulent employee.

Global Employment Screening Services Market Trends

Technological advancements are the key trend gaining popularity in the employment screening services market. Major companies operating in the market are developing technologically advanced offerings to streamline customer and candidate experience. For instance, in May 2021, HireRight, a US-based group background screening company launched HireRight's Applicant Center offering its vaccination history questionnaire. This service allows employers to receive candidate or employee vaccination records quickly and conveniently. The service features a series of four questionnaires namely the vaccination history questionnaire, respirator medical questionnaire, tuberculosis exposure questionnaire, and the covid-19 vaccination questionnaire. This service offers employers the ability to efficiently screen the health records of employees. The questionnaire is based on the guidelines of various government regulatory bodies.
