Definition:

Dental insurance is a kind of insurance intended to pay a portion of the prices associated with dental care. There are many different kinds of individual, family, or group dental insurance plans classified into 3 primary categories such as Indemnity, preferred provider Network (PPO), and Dental Health Managed Organizations (DHMO). Typically dental offices have a fee schedule or a list of costs for the dental services or procedures they provide. Dental insurance firms have similar fee schedules that are usually based on Usual and Customary dental services, an average of fees in an area. The fee schedule is usually used because of the transactional instrument between the insurance company, dental office and/or dentist, and the consumer.
