We cannot simply return to the world as it was before the pandemic. However, if we embrace the lessons we have learned, we open ourselves up to a new page of endless possibilities.”

Different pandemic measures, especially the mask mandate, have had a profound impact on students' confidence and communication abilities, negatively affecting their growth and learning to a great extent. Curation and inspiration behind 'Unmasked Smile' can be traced back to a deeply personal experience of Wonders Initiatives' Creative Director & Artist-in-residence, Sharon Lee, a professional portrait photographer. During her work, she encountered a child who adamantly refused to remove her mask for a photo shoot, “Many children seemed to consider mask as a necessary accessory, removing mask had even turned to a taboo for many of them, even when the measures were lifted”, Sharon Lee added. This encounter prompted her to reflect on the intangible changes that have gradually eroded the fabric of our daily lives over the past three years.

'Unmasked Smile' brings together a collection of innocent yet inspirational artworks created by students of schools sponsored by The Hong Kong Council of the Church of Christ in China (HKCCCC) during the pandemic, along with re-imagined art installations created by local artists. The exhibition aims to showcase the imaginative interpretations of our next generation as they envision life after this challenging period, and explore the profound meaning of the pandemic in their young lives.

The opening ceremony of the exhibition will take place on 4th June 2023 in the afternoon at 3pm, with Rev. Wong Ka Fai, the General Secretary of The Hong Kong Council of the Church of Christ in China (HKCCCC) - Wonders Initiatives' education partner, along with Ms. Andrea Leung, Group General Manger (Marketing) of Sino Group, as the main officiating guests. Their presence underscores the significance of this event and highlights the collaborative efforts to support the integration of art and education.

Kelven Lit, Marketing & Communications Director of Wonders Initiatives, who serves as co-curator of the exhibition, states, "We cannot simply return to the world as it was before the pandemic. However, if we embrace the lessons we have learned, we open ourselves up to a new page of endless possibilities." This sentiment resonates deeply within 'Unmasked Smile', and encourages visitors to engage with the transformative power of resilience and adaptation.

Another co-curator of the exhibition, Wonders Initiatives' Artistic Director Fredrick Liu, affirms, "This is an exhibition about the future. The world of children is vibrant and colorful, brimming with self-assurance and carefree joy. May their creations inspire you, even just a little." By immersing themselves in the intricate details and vibrant expressions of the young artists' works, visitors will be transported into a world of boundless imagination and youthful optimism, further
