

CopperSmith® Doubles Down on Range Hood Offering

The company is looking to keep it simple and do more of what's working.

CopperSmith already has arguably the most unique selection of range hoods in the world today. Offered in a variety of metals, unlimited colors & textures, sizes, and accessories - the options are staggering. For the growth plans, it's simply business as usual.

Opponents of the strategy have said it would be impossible to scale manufacturing of such complexity - something CopperSmith® engineers clearly disagree with. Although the company's products present literally millions of possible combinations - they have found a way to make that process streamlined for the consumer & manufacturers.

It's incredible what technology is enabling forward-thinking companies to do with manufacturing automation and customization for retail.”

Other critics claim the hood collection lacks “Design Identity”, something the company's founder laughs off as simply not understanding the company's vision and value proposition. He claims that the website is meant to visually display all the possibilities to assist buyers in enabling their configuration that cohesively works with their home design. An intriguing take on compared to typically luxury retail presentation strategies.

The company plans to launch a new line of range hoods in early 2024 that showcases even more customization options than are currently offered onsite. More mixing and matching of metals per customer demand to double down on the highly customizable strategy.
