

SPARC AI SELECTS GOOGLE CORAL TO LAUNCH GEOSPATIAL CHIP FOR AUTONOMOUS DRONES

TORONTO, CANADA, September 20, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- SPARC AI INC. (CSE: SPAI) (OTC: EGTTF) (Frankfurt: 5OV0) ("SPAI" or the "Company") is pleased to announce it has selected Coral as the preferred platform for embedding its patented geospatial code.

The SPARC AI logo, with "SPARC" in blue and "AI" in a lighter blue, set against a light gray background.

Coral (<https://coral.ai>) is a company owned by Google for developing AI applications on microcontroller boards and processor chips.

Coral helps bring on-device AI application ideas from prototype to production. They offer a platform of hardware components and software tools to allow SPARC AI to integrate its code base and launch its own commercial chip for sale.

By leveraging Coral, SPARC AI can offer an industry accepted microchip that can be integrated into any sensor or camera device. It can also be integrated into drones and robot devices.

The chip integration will make SPARC AI products covert and leverage edge computing with no connection to the cloud or internet. It will deliver unprecedented geospatial capability that is highly scalable, fast and accurate.

The Company plans to offer its customers a simple plug and play integration of SPARC AI. It could also launch its own branded drones by partnering with an OEM drone manufacturer.

SPARC AI is working with a local software and embedded systems engineering firm to undertake the technical work.
