NEWPORT BEACH, CA, USA, October 10, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Sentencing Stats has created an easy-to-understand infographic to explain Amendment 821 Part B, the "zero point offender" amendment going into effect November 1, 2023.

This amendment creates a new guideline at §4C1. 1 and allows for retroactive sentence reductions of up to two offense levels for approximately 7,272 federal inmates.

We want to spread awareness to as many people as possible, including those who may not know about potential reductions or have resources to explore eligibility alone.”

Mark Allenbaugh

However, not every inmate automatically qualifies. Sentencing Stats’ Zero Point Offender infographic breaks down the amendment’s impact and qualification process in simple, digestible steps. Readers learn the criteria for eligibility, how to apply, key dates, and factors that could affect outcomes like downward departures. Recommendations for inmates in Zones A and B are explained.

The infographic aims to raise awareness and maximize fairness by making this complex legal change accessible. It empowers affected individuals to self-advocate and helps attorneys, advocates and the public properly inform and support inmates.

While life-changing for thousands, the amendment can seem opaque without guidance. As a sentencing expert, Sentencing Stats’ Chief Research Officer and co-founder Mark Allenbaugh had this to say: “We want to spread awareness to as many people as possible, including those who may not know about potential reductions or have resources to explore eligibility alone.” Added CEO Darren Kramer: “we felt it was imperative to develop an easy-to-understand resource to help inmates, their loved ones, public defenders and attorneys alike understand the amendment qualifications and process”.

The infographic is available both on SentencingStats.com's website and on the free resource site, developed by Sentencing Stats,
