NEW YORK, NY -

Renowned welded metal artist Kaimi Niemann invites art enthusiasts and cultural connoisseurs to experience the unveiling of "Mahalo Lenape" at 407 East 75th Street, New York City, on Saturday, November 18, 2023.

"Mahalo Lenape" pays homage to the rich tapestry of Lenape heritage, seamlessly woven into the historical fabric of 'Manahatta,' the land of hills, which has been a cultural hub and gathering place for centuries. Niemann's meticulous craftsmanship over five years has resulted in a welded metal sculpture that stands as a vibrant tribute to the Lenape tribe's peaceful existence.

Situated in Manhattan, "Mahalo Lenape" represents more than just an art installation; it embodies a spiritual odyssey of prayer, meditation, and the transformative art of yoga.

Niemann's artistic alchemy melds metals into a stunning portrayal of the original stewards of the land, envisioning a life in harmonious balance with all of creation.

Curtis Zunigha, a tribal director, lauds the work, stating, "Mahalo Lenape, through its vivid color, dynamic shape, and rich texture, profoundly honors the Lenape spirit."

Recognized as the 'Picasso of Steel' and drawing inspiration from Claire Falkenstein's "New Gates of Paradise," Niemann infuses his unique flair into this magnum opus. The welded metal masterpiece, likened to the works of Jackson Pollock, is a testament to Niemann's artistic
