Ears

Hearing loss can affect all ages, and since at least one in six adults suffers from hearing loss to some degree, it is reasonable to assume that hearing loss is a common condition. Seek immediate medical care if a sudden loss of hearing since treatment needs to start as soon as possible. Getting medical advice is also important if hearing loss in just one ear, or detect a slow loss of hearing.

Throat

Food swallowing difficulties, and trembling or a hoarse voice during speech are possible symptoms of throat and voice disorders. This may be a sign of a more serious issue, and if it is neglected, it may worsen the condition and become more difficult to improve.

Ear, nose, and throat problems can be difficult to identify, or the child may not complain about them at all.
