In addition to co-producing Valley In The Clouds, David Arkenstone is featured on Yamaha DX-TX system, Mirage, Emulator II, Memory Moog, grand piano, guitar, harp, and fretless bass. Reflecting on the upcoming streaming release, David says: "I am excited to re-release my first album, Valley In The Clouds, especially remastered and remixed in the Dolby Atmos® format. This will always be a special album for me, as it was the first time anyone heard my music out in the world. I'm thankful to all my fans for allowing me to still have a career 35 years later! So many listeners have followed my journey from my debut album all the way through today. And I'm grateful to Daniel Chase for his 'organic and electronic percussion' on Valley In The Clouds, and to Eric Lindert and David Vartanian for helping me sculpt my first recording."

Valley In The Clouds was remixed/remastered in Dolby Atmos® by MixedByHill (Øneheart, Benny Benassi, Natanael Cano). Notable credits on the original 1987 release include the following: Produced by Eric Lindert and David Arkenstone, engineered and mixed by David Vartanian, mastered by Randy Kling,

Within the Valley in the Clouds, Arkenstone emerged fully formed in '87 as architect of fantasy spaces and imaginary tales. His gorgeous melodies & intricate arrangements are still breathtaking today.”

John Diliberto, host of Echoes Radio show and Echoes Podcast additional engineering by Patrick Sheedy, cover art by Mark Geisheker. The track list of Ancient Legend, Stepping Stars, Valley In The Clouds, Princess, Eastern Dream, Night Wind, Rain, The Sun Girl, and Lost Temple captures the essence of legendary composer David Arkenstone's vision of creating an emotional realm to be explored time and again.
