

Millwest Amish Furniture Fights for Sustainability

With Rise of Concern for Environmental Safety, Millwest Amish Furniture Fights for Sustainable Practices at Every Turn

PLAIN CITY, OH, UNITED STATES, April 25, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ --

As Spring rolls in Millwest Amish Furniture prepares by replenishing their showroom with new and established styles from some of the best brands in the business.

Production at Berlin Gardens, Levi's Leisure and Siesta Outdoors starts way before cutting and shaping. It begins with Tangent; the largest and most trusted poly lumber manufacturer in North America. Tangent's production begins with trash, more formally 'post-consumer, post-industrial materials, sourced from partnerships with key-customers and companies.

Partnerships that allow for excess production materials and other 'trash' to be shipped to Tangent warehouses rather than landfills. Once the materials are collected, they are then sent through a purifying process before being sorted and transformed into dense, durable poly lumber. The lumber is then shipped to outdoor furniture manufacturers such as Berlin Gardens, Levi's Leisure, Siesta Outdoors and more. This process coins the term Closed-Loop Recycling, which assures an eco-friendly, efficient line of sourcing, building and buying. Tangent's circular recycling reduces plastic/trash waste during and post-production, earning them a Green Circle Certification. The requirements for the Green Circle Certification set high standards for companies such as Tangent, keeping all practices ethical and sustainable.

Millwest Amish Furniture prioritizes upholding business practices and maintaining customer service that is green and clean. A large part of this effort is Millwest's partnerships with outdoor furniture manufacturers that have the same standards and goals for sustainability.
