/EINPresswire.com/ -- As search engines evolve with AI and the emergence of Google's Search Generative Experience (SGE), businesses can no longer afford to stick with outdated SEO practices. Link Publishers the world's first AI-driven link-building and guest posting platform made a bold statement BrightonSEO 2025 on how the future of SEO is being redefined by intelligent search and shifting user behaviours.

Representing the brand, Co-founder Harshal Shah delivered a thought-provoking session that challenged conventional link-building methods BrightonSEO. Moving beyond jargon, he presented a simple but powerful insight: "In today's dynamic search landscape, clinging to old tactics is like using a paper map in the age of GPS. To grow, brands must evolve with search and that means embracing smarter, AI-aligned strategies that build real authority."

In his talk, Harshal explained how traditional link-building is losing relevance, and why SEO success now depends on earning trust through authoritative content placements, strategic partnerships, and AI-informed link-building frameworks that align with modern search engine algorithms.

This shift isn't just technical it's strategic. Business owners, digital marketers, and agency leaders must rethink how they build visibility online. As search becomes more intelligent and conversational, brands need to position themselves as credible sources across niche communities and high-domain platforms.

"Search is changing and so should your SEO," added Het Balar, Founder of Link Publishers.
