The National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) sets rigorous standards, such as NFPA 10, which mandate regular fire extinguisher inspections, maintenance, and documentation to ensure equipment reliability. However, businesses often struggle with these evolving requirements, risking fines, insurance penalties, or safety lapses. According to the U.S. Fire Administration, non-residential fires caused $3.1 billion in damages in 2023, with 28% of incidents linked to outdated or faulty equipment. ACE Fire Protection’s timely services tackle this problem head-on, offering Brooklyn businesses a lifeline to achieve compliance without the headache.

ACE Fire Protection, founded in 1964, has served New York City, Long Island, and New Jersey for over six decades, earning a reputation for reliability and expertise.
