From the start, Lotus Sculpture has been motivated by a desire to preserve cultures and by a love of craftsmanship. Owner and founder Kyle Tortora wanted to create an international market for religious artwork of the East so that talented Indian artisans, Thai artisans, Balinese artisans, and others can continue their craft for many generations to come. This is a promise that puts as much value on art and learning as it does on commerce: the company values art and learning as highly as commerce. Information on every statue's god or symbolism is provided, exposing American consumers to centuries of religious history. For religion on its own or for art to be appreciated, these religious statues are carefully crafted with stories and symbolism to add depth to any setting.
