

Americans Are Relocating in Record Numbers — Here's Where They're Headed in 2025 | Terry Moving & Storage

The Carolinas, Tennessee, and parts of the Pacific Northwest are drawing thousands of new residents.

LAKE FOREST, CA, UNITED STATES, June 16, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ --

The American migration map is shifting dramatically in 2025. According to a nationwide survey on long-distance moves, families and individuals are continuing to leave high-cost metro areas in California and Florida in search of more affordable, livable communities. The Carolinas,

Tennessee, and parts of the Pacific Northwest are among the most in-demand regions, and Terry Moving & Storage is stepping up to make these big moves seamless, stress-free, and efficient.

Whether it's Raleigh's booming job market or the wide-open spaces of Boise, thousands are heading to cities where homeownership and breathing room are still possible. The stakes are high, and the timing is urgent as inventory in these hot markets is moving fast.

WHERE ARE PEOPLE GOING?

Once again, Myrtle Beach, SC/Wilmington, NC tops the list as the most moved-to region in the country, followed closely by Ocala, FL, and Raleigh, NC. States like Texas, North Carolina, and Tennessee continue to attract families, young professionals, and retirees, thanks to a lower cost of living, friendlier tax structures, and lifestyle perks that are hard to beat.
